Artist Note:

In the following pages I have collected some of my favorite photographs that I made through my first year in Mallorca, Spain.

My family and I moved with our two cats to Mallorca in September of 2024. Before that, we lived in a small Pueblo Blanco in Andalucía. I thought moving to an island would feel small; feel constricted. In fact, Mallorca, with the commuter trains and extensive bus network, is a bigger world than we had before. Add in our bicycles, and Mallorca is a land with so many possibilities for adventure and exploration. With beaches, mountains, plains, pueblos, and cities, Mallorca has a remarkably diverse landscape.

It is that sense of exploration that I think you will find in the following pages. Mallorca is at a crossroads of millenia of cultures and history where it lies in the middle of the Mediterranean sea. And that history of confluence and mixing has had a profound effect on the people, architecture and landscape of the island, and that had a profound effect on me.

I hope that you enjoy the following pages, and find some hint of the thrill that living and exploring here has had for me.
